In the matter of:

Claimant/Appellant

vs.

R.A.A.C. Order No. 13-09587
Referee Decision No. 0002337708-03U

Employer/Appellee

ORDER OF REEMPLOYMENT ASSISTANCE APPEALS COMMISSION

This case comes before the Commission for disposition of an appeal of the decision of a reemployment assistance appeals referee pursuant to Section 443.151(4)(c), Florida Statutes. The referee's decision stated that a request for review should specify any and all allegations of error with respect to the referee's decision, and that allegations of error not specifically set forth in the request for review may be considered waived.

Upon consideration, the Commission finds that the appeal of the referee's decision was timely filed. The Commission has jurisdiction to decide the case.

Upon appeal of an examiner's determination, a referee schedules a hearing. Parties are advised prior to the hearing that the hearing is their only opportunity to present all of their evidence in support of their case. The appeals referee has the responsibility to develop the hearing record, weigh the evidence, resolve conflicts in the evidence, and render a decision supported by competent, substantial evidence. Section 443.151(4)(b)5., Florida Statutes, provides that any part of the evidence may be received in written form, and all testimony of parties and witnesses shall be made under oath. Irrelevant, immaterial, or unduly repetitious evidence shall be excluded, but all other evidence of a type commonly relied upon by reasonably prudent persons in the conduct of their affairs is admissible, whether or not such evidence would be admissible in a trial in state court. Hearsay evidence may be used for the purpose of supplementing or explaining other evidence, or to support a finding if it would be admissible over objection in civil actions. Notwithstanding Section 120.57(1)(c), Florida Statutes, hearsay evidence may support a finding of fact if the party against whom it is offered has a reasonable opportunity to review such evidence prior to the hearing and the appeals referee or special deputy determines, after considering all relevant facts and circumstances, that the evidence is trustworthy and probative and that the interests of justice are best served by its admission into evidence.

By law, the Commission's review is limited to those matters that were presented to the referee and are contained in the official record. A decision of an appeals referee cannot be overturned by the Commission if the referee's material findings are supported by competent, substantial evidence and the decision comports with the legal standards established by the Florida Legislature. The Commission cannot reweigh the evidence or consider additional evidence that a party could have reasonably been expected to present to the referee during the hearing. Additionally, it is the responsibility of the appeals referee to judge the credibility of the witnesses and to resolve conflicts in evidence, including testimonial evidence. Absent extraordinary circumstances, the Commission cannot substitute its judgment and overturn a referee's conflict resolution.

Having considered all arguments raised on appeal and having reviewed the hearing record, the Commission concludes no legal basis exists to reopen or supplement the record by the acceptance of any additional evidence sent to the Commission or to remand the case for further proceedings. The Commission concludes the record adequately supports the referee's material findings and the referee's conclusion is a correct application of the pertinent laws to the material facts of the case.

Effective May 17, 2013, Section 443.036(30), Florida Statutes, states that misconduct connected with work, "irrespective of whether the misconduct occurs at the workplace or during working hours, includes, but is not limited to, the following, which may not be construed in pari materia with each other":

(a) Conduct demonstrating a conscious disregard of an employer's interests and found to be a deliberate violation or disregard of the reasonable standards of behavior which the employer expects of his or her employee. Such conduct may include, but is not limited to, willful damage to an employer's property that results in damage of more than $50; or theft of employer property or property of a customer or invitee of the employer.

(b) Carelessness or negligence to a degree or recurrence that manifests culpability or wrongful intent, or shows an intentional and substantial disregard of the employer's interests or of the employee's duties and obligations to his or her employer.

(c) Chronic absenteeism or tardiness in deliberate violation of a known policy of the employer or one or more unapproved absences following a written reprimand or warning relating to more than one unapproved absence.

(d) A willful and deliberate violation of a standard or regulation of this state by an employee of an employer licensed or certified by this state, which violation would cause the employer to be sanctioned or have its license or certification suspended by this state.

(e)1. A violation of an employer's rule, unless the claimant can demonstrate that:

- a. He or she did not know, and could not reasonably know, of the rule's requirements;
- b. The rule is not lawful or not reasonably related to the job environment and performance; or
- c. The rule is not fairly or consistently enforced.

2. Such conduct may include, but is not limited to, committing criminal assault or battery on another employee, or on a customer or invitee of the employer; or committing abuse or neglect of a patient, resident, disabled person, elderly person, or child in her or his professional care.

The record reflects the employer discharged the claimant for taking business that belonged to the employer in violation of company policy. The employer's policy states:

[The employer] will not condone, under any conditions, offering of paying kickbacks, under-the-table payments, illegal rebates or similar improper or inappropriate payments in exchange for business. All sales to customers must be based upon price, terms, types of service, customer service to be provided to the account and similar relevant and lawful factors.

In a personal statement provided to the employer, the claimant admitted accepting payments totaling $150 from customers for services personally rendered which, based on the believed evidence, could have been performed by the employer's third party vendor at a cost of $389.97.

The claimant's actions in this case, which were taken during his employment, were in competition with the employer. The claimant owed a common law duty of loyalty to his employer. That rule is stated in Fish v. Adams, 401 So. 2d 843, 844 (Fla. 5th DCA 1981), in which the court explained, "The general rule with regard to an employee's duty of loyalty to his employer is that an employee does not violate his duty of loyalty when he merely organizes a corporation during his employment to carry on a rival business after the expiration of his employment. However, that employee may not engage in disloyal acts in anticipation of his future competition, such as using confidential information acquired during the course of his employment or soliciting customers and other employees prior to the end of his employment." Further, in New World Fashions v. Lieberman, 429 So. 2d 1276, 1277 (Fla. 1st DCA 1983), the court held, "An agent may not, without the principal's knowledge and consent, enter into any business in competition with his principal and keep for himself any profit accruing from such transaction." While the claimant's actions may not have been dishonest, as found by the referee, his actions were nonetheless in violation of a duty owed to the employer and demonstrated a conscious disregard of the employer's interests amounting to misconduct as defined under Section 443.036(30)(a), Florida Statutes.

The Commission notes the State of Florida allows for restrictive covenants under Section 542.335, Florida Statutes. The employer may enforce such a covenant as long as it is to protect a legitimate business interest such as a customer's good will associated with a specific geographic location or a specific trade area. See §542.335(1)(b)4.b. & c., Fla. Stat. The violation of an enforceable restrictive covenant creates a presumption of irreparable injury to the person seeking enforcement of a restrictive covenant. See §542.335(1)(j), Fla. Stat.; Litwinczuk v. Palm Beach Cardiovascular Clinic, L.C., 939 So. 2d 268, 271 (Fla. 4th DCA 2006). The present claimant's actions in providing services to customers in competition with the employer were harmful to the employer's legitimate business interest, which the policy sought to protect.

The facts in this case are also similar to Fink v. Florida Unemployment Appeals Commission, 665 So. 2d 373 (Fla. 4th DCA 1996), in which a sales associate for a home improvement store was discharged for violating the store's policy prohibiting conflicts of interests. The sales associate performed a side business while advising customers to purchase supplies from the employer. The sales associate's actions resulted in the employer becoming involved in disputes between the sales associates and dissatisfied customers. The appeals referee and the Commission held that the sales associate willfully violated the employer's policy and his actions amounted to misconduct connected with work. The Court affirmed.

While the referee found the claimant's actions constituted misconduct under Section 443.036(30)(a), Florida Statutes, the Commission notes the claimant's actions also constitute misconduct under Section 443.036(30)(e), Florida Statutes, because they violated an employer rule. On appeal to the Commission, the claimant asserts the employer's rule was "vague." As noted in the decision, the policy specifically provided the employer, "will not condone offering or paying of kickbacks, under the table payments, illegal rebates or other similarly improper payments in exchange for business. All sales to customers must be based upon price terms, type of service, customer service to be provided to the account and similar relevant and lawful factors." The Commission concludes the quoted policy was neither vague nor ambiguous. Furthermore, the claimant's actions in providing services to customers for personal payment, and at a rate less than that charged by the employer for similar services, was in clear violation of the employer's policy. Indeed, the claimant, in his personal statement provided to the employer, admitted accepting payments totaling $150 from customers for services personally rendered which, based on the believed evidence, could have been performed by the employer's third party vendor at a cost of $389.97.

The referee's decision is affirmed. The claimant is disqualified from receipt of benefits. The employer's account is relieved of charges in connection with this claim.

It is so ordered.

DECISION OF APPEALS REFEREE

Important appeal rights are explained at the end of this decision.

Derechos de apelación importantes son explicados al final de esta decisión.

Issues Involved: SEPARATION: Whether the claimant was discharged for misconduct connected with work or voluntarily left work without good cause as defined in the statute, pursuant to Sections 443.101(1), (9), (10), (11); 443.036(30), Florida Statutes; Rule 73B-11.020, Florida Administrative Code.

times new roman; Findings of Fact: The claimant began working for the employer on September 17, 2012. The claimant worked as a sales specialist. The employer had a policy that will not condone offering or paying of kickbacks, under the table payments, illegal rebates or other similarly improper payments in exchange for business. All sales to customers must be based upon price terms, type of service, customer service to be provided to the account and similar relevant and lawful factors. The claimant was aware of the employer's policy. During employment, a customer contacted the store requesting that his scanner be hooked up for him. The employer charged $129.99 for the service. The claimant took the business for himself and went after hours to hook up the scanner for the customer. The claimant charged the customer $50 for the transaction and kept the money for himself. On two other occasions customers came to the store looking for help on how to work the windows eight operating system purchased from the store. The claimant took the business for himself. The claimant went after hours to provide the technical services for the customers. The claimant charged each customer $50, thus making a total of $100 from the two transactions. On August 2, 2013, the store manager discharged the claimant for taking business that belonged to the employer.

Conclusions of Law: As of May 17, 2013, the Reemployment Assistance Law of Florida defines misconduct connected with work as, but is not limited to, the following, which may not be construed in pari materia with each other:

(a) Conduct demonstrating conscious disregard of an employer's interests and found to be a deliberate violation or disregard of the reasonable standards of behavior which the employer expects of his or her employee. Such conduct may include, but is not limited to, willful damage to an employer's property that results in damage of more than $50; theft of employer property or property of a customer or invitee of the employer.

(b) Carelessness or negligence to a degree or recurrence that manifests culpability, or wrongful intent, or shows an intentional and substantial disregard of the employer's interest or of the employee's duties and obligations to his or her employer.

(c) Chronic absenteeism or tardiness in deliberate violation of a known policy of the employer or one or more unapproved absences following a written reprimand or warning relating to more than one unapproved absence.

(d) A willful and deliberate violation of a standard or regulation of this state by an employee of an employer licensed or certified by this state, which violation would cause the employer to be sanctioned or have its license or certification suspended by this state.

(e) 1. A violation of an employer's rule, unless the claimant can demonstrate that:

- a. He or she did not know, and could not reasonably know, of the rule's requirements;
- b. The rule is not lawful or not reasonably related to the job environment and performance; or
- c. The rule is not fairly or consistently enforced.

2. Such conduct may include, but is not limited to, committing criminal assault or battery on another employee, or on a customer or invitee of the employer; or committing abuse or neglect of a patient, resident, disabled person, elderly person, or child in her or his professional care.

The record shows the claimant was discharged. The burden of proving misconduct is on the employer. Lewis v. Unemployment Appeals Commission, 498 So.2d 608 (Fla. 5th DCA 1986). The proof must be by a preponderance of competent substantial evidence. De Groot v. Sheffield, 95 So.2d 912 (Fla. 1957); Tallahassee Housing Authority v. Unemployment Appeals Commission, 483 So.2d 413 (Fla. 1986). The record shows the claimant violated the employer's policy. The law provides that a claimant who was discharged for a dishonest act in connection with the work or for misconduct in connection with the work will be disqualified for benefits. In the instant case, the record reflects that the claimant's actions were a dishonest act. The claimant's actions demonstrated a violation of a standard of behavior the employer had a right to expect, and shows an intentional disregard of the claimant's obligations to the employer. Accordingly, the claimant was discharged for misconduct connected with work; the claimant should be disqualified from the receipt of benefits.

The hearing officer was presented with conflicting testimony regarding material issues of fact and is charged with resolving these conflicts. The Reemployment Assistance Appeals Commission set forth factors to be considered in resolving credibility questions. These include the witness' opportunity and capacity to observe the event or act in question; any prior inconsistent statement by the witness; witness bias or lack of bias; the contradiction of the witness' version of events by other evidence or its consistency with other evidence; the inherent improbability of the witness' version of events; and the witness' demeanor. Upon considering these factors, the hearing officer finds the testimony of the employer to be more credible. Therefore, material conflicts in the evidence are resolved in favor of the employer.

The law provides that benefits will not be charged to the employment record of a contributing employer who furnishes required notice to the employer when the claimant was discharged for misconduct connected with the work.

The employer proved misconduct. Therefore, the employer's tax account will not be charged.

Decision: The determination dated September 3, 2013, is REVERSED. The claimant is disqualified to receive benefits from July 28, 2013, for the following five weeks and until earning $3,536. The employer's tax account will not be charged.

If this decision disqualifies and/or holds the claimant ineligible for benefits already received, the claimant will be required to repay those benefits. The specific amount of any overpayment will be calculated by the department and set forth in a separate overpayment determination, unless specified in this decision. However, the time to request review of this decision is as shown above and is not stopped, delayed or extended by any other determination, decision or order.
