R.A.A.C. Order No. 15-01738

vs.

Referee Decision No. 0024573219-02U

Employer/Appellant

ORDER OF REEMPLOYMENT ASSISTANCE APPEALS COMMISSION

This case comes before the Commission for disposition of an appeal of the decision of a reemployment assistance appeals referee pursuant to Section 443.151(4)(c), Florida Statutes. The referee's decision stated that a request for review should specify any and all allegations of error with respect to the referee's decision, and that allegations of error not specifically set forth in the request for review may be considered waived.

Upon appeal of an examiner's determination, a referee schedules a hearing. Parties are advised prior to the hearing that the hearing is their only opportunity to present all of their evidence in support of their case. The appeals referee has responsibility to develop the hearing record, weigh the evidence, resolve conflicts in the evidence, and render a decision supported by competent, substantial evidence. Section 443.151(4)(b)5., Florida Statutes, provides that any part of the evidence may be received in written form, and all testimony of parties and witnesses shall be made under oath. Irrelevant, immaterial, or unduly repetitious evidence shall be excluded, but all other evidence of a type commonly relied upon by reasonably prudent persons in the conduct of their affairs is admissible, whether or not such evidence would be admissible in a trial in state court. Hearsay evidence may be used for the purpose of supplementing or explaining other evidence, or to support a finding if it would be admissible over objection in civil actions. Notwithstanding Section 120.57(1)(c), Florida Statutes, hearsay evidence may support a finding of fact if the party against whom it is offered has a reasonable opportunity to review such evidence prior to the hearing and the appeals referee or special deputy determines, after considering all relevant facts and circumstances, that the evidence is trustworthy and probative and that the interests of justice are best served by its admission into evidence.

By law, the Commission's review is limited to those matters that were presented to the referee and are contained in the official record. A decision of an appeals referee cannot be overturned by the Commission if the referee's material findings are supported by competent, substantial evidence and the decision comports with the legal standards established by the Florida Legislature. The Commission cannot reweigh the evidence or consider additional evidence that a party could have reasonably been expected to present to the referee during the hearing. Additionally, it is the responsibility of the appeals referee to judge the credibility of the witnesses and to resolve conflicts in evidence, including testimonial evidence. Absent extraordinary circumstances, the Commission cannot substitute its judgment and overturn a referee's conflict resolution.

Having considered all arguments raised on appeal and having reviewed the hearing record, the Commission concludes no basis exists to reopen or remand the case for further proceedings. The Commission concludes the record adequately supports the referee's material findings and the referee's conclusion is a correct application of the pertinent laws to the material facts of the case.

Upon review by the Commission, we note that the referee's decision reflects only one party appeared at the hearing. The decision is corrected to reflect both parties appeared. We further note that, on appeal to the Commission, the employer maintains the claimant was discharged for violation of company policy which stated an employee was subject to disciplinary measures which could include termination if convicted of anything other than a minor traffic citation. The record reflects the claimant acknowledged receipt of the policy in 2009, was admittedly convicted of a misdemeanor battery in August 2011, immediately reported the conviction to his immediate supervisor who admittedly failed, due to his misunderstanding of the policy, to report the conviction to the human resource department. The record further reflects the employer discharged the claimant in November 2014 when the employer's human resource department became aware of the conviction through a routine background check initiated by their department.

The relevant provision applicable to this case is subparagraph (e)(1)c. of Section 443.036(29), Florida Statutes (2014), amended to reflect the correct statutory citation for this case, which defines misconduct as "a violation of an employer's rule, unless the claimant can demonstrate that . . . [t]he rule is not fairly or consistently enforced." There is no dispute that the employer became aware of the conviction in 2011 when the claimant voluntarily reported the information to the general manager, and we further note there was no requirement in the policy for the claimant to directly report the conviction to the human resource department. Although the general manager did not explicitly admit that he warned the claimant, he openly admitted that he received the information and did nothing else to make the employer aware of the violation. Notwithstanding the general manager's misunderstanding of the rule, the Commission concludes the claimant was forthright and acted reasonably in his duty owed to the employer to report the conviction. We further conclude that the claimant, through the testimony of the employer's general manager, who notably testified on behalf of the claimant, established proof that the employer did not enforce its rule until three years after the violation was reported. We conclude, therefore, that the employer's three-year delay in enforcing a rule, solely resulting from the inaction of the employer, does not meet the criteria of fair enforcement as required by subsection (e) of Section 443.036(29), Florida Statutes (2014).

The referee's decision is affirmed. The claimant is not disqualified from receipt of benefits as a result of this claim. If otherwise eligible, the claimant is entitled to benefits. The employer's record shall be charged with its proportionate share of benefits paid in connection with this claim.

It is so ordered.

DECISION OF APPEALS REFEREE

Important appeal rights are explained at the end of this decision.

Derechos de apelación importantes son explicados al final de esta decisión.

CHARGES TO EMPLOYER'S EMPLOYMENT RECORD: Whether benefit payments made to the claimant will be charged to the employment record of the employer, pursuant to Sections 443.101(9); 443.131(3)(a), Florida Statutes; Rules 73B-10.026; 11.018, Florida Administrative Code. (If charges are not at issue on the current claim, the hearing may determine charges on a subsequent claim.)

Issues Involved: SEPARATION: Whether the claimant was discharged for misconduct connected with work or voluntarily left work without good cause as defined in the statute, pursuant to Sections 443.101(1), (9), (10), (11), (13); 443.036(29), Florida Statutes; Rule 73B-11.020, Florida Administrative Code.

Findings of Fact: The claimant worked full time as a dispatcher for an auto salvage auction from May 2009, through November 21, 2014. In May 2011, the claimant was arrested for misdemeanor battery. The claimant notified his local manager of the arrest. The general manager maintains discretion for issuance of warnings. The claimant was issued a verbal warning for his arrest. The general manager was under the impression he only needed to report a felony to human resources. The claimant also informed the general manager he was going to plead no contest in August 2011. The claimant continued employment. The employer conducts criminal background checks every 36 months as part of continued employment. In November 2014, the employer received information the claimant had not passed his background screening as a result of the arrest and conviction in 2011. The employer has a confidential contract with a specific customer which states any misdemeanor or felony will be immediate termination. Employees are not informed of the confidential contract. The claimant was discharged on November 21, 2014.

Conclusions of Law: As of May 17, 2013, the Reemployment Assistance Law of Florida defines misconduct connected with work as, but is not limited to, the following, which may not be construed in pari materia with each other:

- a. Conduct demonstrating conscious disregard of an employer's interests and found to be a deliberate violation or disregard of the reasonable standards of behavior which the employer expects of his or her employee. Such conduct may include, but is not limited to, willful damage to an employer's property that results in damage of more than $50; theft of employer property or property of a customer or invitee of the employer.
- b. Carelessness or negligence to a degree or recurrence that manifests culpability, or wrongful intent, or shows an intentional and substantial disregard of the employer's interest or of the employee's duties and obligations to his or her employer.
- c. Chronic absenteeism or tardiness in deliberate violation of a known policy of the employer or one or more unapproved absences following a written reprimand or warning relating to more than one unapproved absence.
- d. A willful and deliberate violation of a standard or regulation of this state by an employee of an employer licensed or certified by this state, which violation would cause the employer to be sanctioned or have its license or certification suspended by this state.
- e. 1. A violation of an employer's rule, unless the claimant can demonstrate that:
 - a. He or she did not know, and could not reasonably know, of the rule's requirements;
 - b. The rule is not lawful or not reasonably related to the job environment and performance; or
 - c. The rule is not fairly or consistently enforced.
2. Such conduct may include, but is not limited to, committing criminal assault or battery on another employee, or on a customer or invitee of the employer; or committing abuse or neglect of a patient, resident, disabled person, elderly person, or child in her or his professional care.

The record shows the employer was the moving party in the separation; thus the claimant was considered to be discharged. The burden of proving misconduct is on the employer. Lewis v. Unemployment Appeals Commission, 498 So.2d 608 (Fla. 5th DCA 1986). The proof must be by a preponderance of competent substantial evidence. De Groot v. Sheffield, 95 So.2d 912 (Fla. 1957); Tallahassee Housing Authority v. Unemployment Appeals Commission, 483 So.2d 413 (Fla. 1986). It was shown the claimant was discharged for failing a background check. The record indicates the employer's policy states the type of discipline will depend on the severity of the violation and the specific facts and circumstances of the conduct. The word depends implies discretion can be made regarding certain circumstances. The record indicates the claimant notified his supervisor immediately of the situation and outcome, and accepted a verbal warning as punishment. Discretion was given and the claimant continued working. The claimant's actions in no way substantiate misconduct or the alleged willful violation of the employer's policy as the employer's representative alleged. The claimant was then discharged three years later for the same infraction due to a "confidential multi million dollar customer contract." In the case of a discharge, the burden of proving misconduct is on the employer. The employer did not meet the burden of proof. The behavior of the claimant, as described by the claimant, and described by the employer's subpoenaed witness, does not meet statutory definition of misconduct under the law. Accordingly, the claimant is not disqualified from the receipt of Reemployment Assistance benefits.

The hearing officer was presented with conflicting testimony regarding material issues of fact and is charged with resolving these conflicts. The Unemployment Appeals Commission set forth factors to be considered in resolving credibility questions. These include the witness' opportunity and capacity to observe the event or act in question; any prior inconsistent statement by the witness; witness bias or lack of bias; the contradiction of the witness' version of events by other evidence or its consistency with other evidence; the inherent improbability of the witness' version of events; and the witness' demeanor. Upon considering these factors, the hearing officer finds the testimony of the claimant to be more credible. Therefore, material conflicts in the evidence are resolved in favor of the claimant.

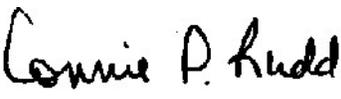

At the hearing, the claimant's representative requested a fee for services in the amount of $500. In consideration of the time and effort expended by the representative and the agreement between the parties, the referee approves a fee of $500 to be paid by the claimant.

Decision: The determination dated December 17, 2014, is REVERSED. The claimant is not disqualified from receiving Reemployment Assistance benefits. The employment record of the employer shall be charged for benefits paid on this claim.

If this decision disqualifies and/or holds the claimant ineligible for benefits already received, the claimant will be required to repay those benefits. The specific amount of any overpayment will be calculated by the department and set forth in a separate overpayment determination, unless specified in this decision. However, the time to request review of this decision is as shown above and is not stopped, delayed or extended by any other determination, decision or order.

This is to certify that a copy of the above decision was distributed/mailed to the last known address of each interested party on March 5, 2015.
